United States Police and Fire Championships

The first Police Olympics were held in San Diego, California in 1967. San Diego Police Lieutenant Veon "Duke" Nyhus recognized the need to promote physical fitness and camaraderie amongst members of the law enforcement community. Duke formulated the idea of the Police Olympics and created the competition with an eye towards promoting physical fitness and sport as both a means for officers to, improve their overall fitness, reduce stress, and to increase their professional abilities.

That first year 504 competitors registered for competition in 16 sports held over 2 days. Following those first Police Olympics Duke wrote the following in the "Fall In" (San Diego Police Department's magazine):

"One year ago, the announcement was made in San Francisco that the San Diego Police Officers Association would host the 1st Annual California Police Olympics. Now that event is history.

Frequently, time is necessary to determine the success or failure of a project. Not so with the Olympics. From the moment contestants began to arrive...comments were made about the program that warmed the hearts of the many officers that worked so hard to make the Police Olympics a successful venture. After the competition and awards presentation, the praises came fast and furious. Everyone was highly impressed and did not hesitate to tell us so.

There is only one way to account for this success. The men and women that believed in the idea of the Olympics worked hard to make this idea a reality. Every event came off without a major hitch. My hat is off to all that contributed to the establishment of what should become a great annual event.

The competition in every event was excellent. It was not until the competition began did anyone realize there were so many champions in law enforcement. State and National champions were found in Archery, Tennis, Weight Lifting, Pistol Shooting, Karate and Judo.

Competitors came to San Diego to compete and compete they did. The main comment heard from the losers was 'wait until next year.' "

Duke's words and vision proved prophetic. What began in 1967 as the California Police Olympics is continuing to spread its influence across the United States of America and throughout the world. Today, there are a number of Police and Fire multi-sport athletic programs taking place throughout the United States and in several countries around the world. The 2011 World Police and Fire Games attracted more than 16,000 competitors. Many of these competitions recognize Duke as the father of the movement.

The name of the original games has changed several times throughout the years. From 1967 through 1989 the Games were known as the California Police Olympics. In 1990 the name changed to the California Police Summer Games. With the inclusion of firefighters in 2000, the name changed to the California Police and Fire Games. 2005 brought the inclusion of several states in the western United States and a change to the Western States Police and Fire Games. Starting with the games in 2012, they will be known as the United States Police and Fire Championships (USPFC).

The entry requirements remain the same with participation limited to full time law enforcement and firefighting personnel, but the United States Police and Fire Championships will now be open to all 50 states and United States' territories. Competition has expanded from the original 16 sports to more than 60 events. As with the first California Police Olympics, the inaugural United States Police and Fire Championships will be held in San Diego.

The California Police Athletic Federation continues as the guiding body and will be partnering with the San Diego Sports Commission to present the United States Police and Fire Championships.

NOTES:

THANK YOU ONTARIO

The Western States Police & Fire Games Federation thanks the City of Ontario, the Ontario Convention and Visitors Bureau, the Ontario Firefighters Association, the Ontario Police Officers Association and the Ontario Police Management Group in Hosting a terrific Games.

The 2011 Western States Police & Fire Games Organizing Committee worked tirelessly to make the Games a success. Hundreds of volunteers were necessary to create the 2011 Western States Police & Fire Games. The WSPFG Federation would like to express their sincere appreciation of the efforts of everyone who contributed to these Games.

Congratulations on a job well done!
